THE SUPERFLUOUS MAN.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

"It is ascertained by inspection of the registers of many countries, that the uniform proportion of male to female births is twenty-one to twenty; accordingly, in respect to marriage, every twenty-first man is naturally superfluous."—Smith's Treatise on Population.

I long have been puzzled to guess,
And so I have frequently said,
What the reason could clearly be
That I never have happened to wed;
But now it is perfectly clear
I am under a natural ban;
The girls are already assigned,
And I am a superfluous man!

Those former statistical chaps
Decided the numerical run
Of women and men in the world,
Is twenty to twenty-one;
And hence in the pairing you see,
Since wooing and wedding began,
For every conjugal score
They've got a superfluous man!

By twenties and twenties they go,
And giddily rush to their fate,
For none of the number, of course,
Can fall of a conjugal mate;
But while they are yielding in scores
To nature's inflexible plan,
There's never a woman for me—
For I am a superfluous man!

It isn't that I am in want
Of personal beauty or grace,
For many a man with a wife
Is uglier far in the face.
Indeed, among elegant men
I fancy myself in the van,
But what is the value of that
When I'm a superfluous man?

Although I am fond of the girls,
For ought I could ever discern
The tender emotion I feel
Is one that they never return;
'Tis idle to quarrel with fate,
For struggle as hard as I can,
They're mated already, you know—
And I'm a superfluous man!
